TANGO GOWN

Latest Fashion Report from London.

London, Sept. 3.—The "Tango" gown, the latest development of fashion, has a very much slit-up skirt and a pair of small Turkish trousers, which reach to the ankles and are held by a band of crystal beads. Over them is worn a drapery of crepe in the same shape, and entirely open, for it is held up as far as the hip line by a few stitches only.

The blouses and bodices to go with these trousers (to quote a customer's description) are made loose and have the appearance of falling off. The upper part of the figure is not outlined in the least. Women don't care a fig how large their waists are, but seem anxious for gowns that make ankle and calf visible.

The Smithsonian Water.

Mr. L. H. Smithson, of Church Hill, who recently sent a sample of his mineral water to the State Board of Health, Bowling Green, for examination, received the following reply:

August 14, 1913.

Mr. L. H. Smithson, Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

Dear Sir:

The sample of water which you collected on the 12th at 5 a. m. was received by us on the 12th at 5 p. m. Immediately a chemical and a bacterial examination was made for determining the safety of the water for drinking purposes, and so far as sanitary condition is concerned, it is a safe water. I should judge that this water is to be classed as a medicinal rather than a water to be used for domestic purposes. It has a great deal of hydrogen sulphide in it and was quite milky in appearance when it came to us.

Very truly yours,
E. H. MARK,
State Sanitary Engineer.

WEED PRICES
TO GO HIGHER

Hogshead Market Still Remains Quiet But Very Firm.

CUTTING SEASON IS NOW ON

The Rains Have Helped The Late Crops To Some Extent.

The hogshead market remains very quiet but firm with holders of tobacco not disposed to make any concessions and the situation all tends to higher prices. The small stocks now on sale and the crop in the field estimated at only about 65 per cent of the average, makes the condition very interesting. The field crop shows some improvement, especially wherever rains have fallen and this is in nearly every locality. In a number of counties the estimate of the crop is from 25 per cent to 50 per cent of the average. Some cutting has already been done and it will be on in full blast next week. While much of the tobacco will be small in size it will all be of thick, leathery texture and very gummy and the heavy weight will go far toward making up for the small size. In some favored instances crops will be unusually fine for any year. But there is bound to be a big shortage in the amount produced and the coming season is expected to be a lively one with prices running high. For the open market here, Inspector Abernathy makes the following report:

Receipts for week..... 16 Hhds.
Receipts for year..... 2753 Hhds.
Sales for week..... 22 Hhds.
Sales for year..... 2392 Hhds.

LOOSE FLOORS.

Sales for week..... 6,850 Lbs.
Sales for season..... 10,293,315 Lbs.

"TOWN BOY."

Writes From Top of Hurricane Hill.

Editor Kentuckian:
I will come in home a few days after this letter reaches you. I am now on top of what is known as Hurricane Hill in Todd county. The puffing and whistling of an engine we hear is not a railroad engine but we call it a lumber engine—20 horse power—climbing this long steep hill with two log wagons hitched to it loaded with logs on its way to the mill. Just under the hill stands an old-time schoolhouse called Push Off, with chimney and a large fire place. See the children laughing As they drink from the sparkling spring, With the goldenrods to blossom yellow And the birds their melodies sing.

Here the professor handed me a yellow flower, such as I am sure my friend in the city was telling me he saw from the car window, and I thought probably it grew from a seed from the prairie and I remarked, "How wonderful nature distributes her colors." One sees large fields of goldenrod from any railroad. I walked along on top of this hill for some distance, here I turned north and climbed down for half a mile and then looked for the Dripping Rock. I walked along by the spring and back to the hill. This is certainly a picturesque place. I went far back under the rock which projects far enough to shelter hundreds of people. Here I picked up pieces of staves from a moonshine still that had been burned. As I drank from this spring I thought I will soon be back home again From Hurricane Hill, I will; Lordy, how it pants a man, Climbing up this awful hill.

I take my trips on foot. As a matter of fact there is no finer or more beneficial form of exercise than walking.

If the young folks will come to my place of business I have something to tell them about the social life in the rural districts.

TOWN BOY.

LABOR DAY

Was Generally Observed Here By Keeping At It.

As a holiday labor day was a failure here. In fact, it never has amounted to anything. There are so many who can't afford to take a holiday that the few who can have the day to themselves. The post-office people had a good time the best part of the day and the men in the banks didn't open up. So many of the men about the court house are candidates for office and are so busy electioneering, and it being county court day besides, that it was just like any other old first Monday to them.

ELECTION SATURDAY

Precinct Committeemen To Be Chosen By Members of the Association.

At the meeting of the county committeemen of the Planters Protective Association, held here last Monday, arrangements were made for the election next Saturday to choose precinct committeemen. The members of the association will go to their regular voting places and cast their votes for their preference for a member of the county committee for the ensuing year. The second Saturday in this month the county committee will meet and elect their chairman and secretary.

State Medical Association.

The Kentucky Medical Association convened in the First Christian church at Bowling Green Monday with an attendance of five hundred physicians from all over the United States. Various committees made reports which were read and approved.

CHEROKEE BUILDING

Another Ornament to the West End of Ninth Street.

Lower Floor Rented and Half of Second Engaged.

A half dozen or more men were standing at the corner of Main and Ninth streets Tuesday admiring and talking about one of the prettiest buildings in the city, The Cherokee.

As is generally known the company putting up this structure had the plans drawn strictly for an office building. The offices on the first floor were taken before work was begun, the contracts being drawn for three years.

On the second floor more than half the offices have already been spoken for and by the time the building is completed there will be a demand for the remainder.

The third floor is to be divided into bachelor apartments. There are quite a number of bookkeepers and salesmen in the city who will be glad to secure apartments in the heart of the business section and take their meals at boarding houses.

The Cherokee is to be heated throughout by hot water, lighted by electricity and furnished with hot and cold water and have every modern convenience.

One of the men in the crowd discussing the new buildings that have recently been put up, remarked that he believed The Cherokee had the prettiest front of any building in the city. One of the directors of the company said, "And it is going to be the prettiest building inside, too." He said that the interior of the whole building would be the prettiest and most elaborate of any our people have yet seen. Everything that will add to the comfort and convenience of those who take rooms there will be provided and the company will spare no expense to supply renters with everything within the bounds of reason that will make people contented and want to "stay there for good."

MRS. ARTHUR HENRY

FALL MOVING

Four Families Pass Through The City Enroute to Tennessee.

Two or three days ago a train of four wagons and two buggies passed through the city loaded with men, women and children and household effects. They had been on the road several days. There were four families on the move, numbering over twenty souls. They came from Sullivan county, Ind., and their objective point was Laurenceburg, Laurence county, Tenn. When asked if they were driven from Indiana on account of the drouth the reply was: "No, the drouth didn't hurt where we were; we were dissatisfied with the country and wanted to get back to old Tennessee, where we came from." The annual appearance of these emigrants and the coming of the Gypsies are unfailing evidences that fall is near.

CIVIC LEAGUE

Got Busy Tuesday and Planned to Bring About Many Reforms.

Perhaps Tuesday's meeting was the most important, in some respects, ever held by the Civic League. The ladies are doing a great work and are planning to bring about many reforms. Among the many things suggested were the following:

Saturday shopping to be done early enough in the day to do away with overworking clerks and drivers of delivery wagons, business to cease and doors to close at 9 o'clock.

A committee, consisting of Miss Fannie Phelps and Mrs. Jouett Henry was appointed to interview the merchants on early closing Saturday nights.

Mrs. Thos. W. Long and Miss Mary Goldthwaite were named as a committee to look after the approaches to Edgewater Park and its general improvement.

Mrs. W. T. Fowler and Mrs. F. W. Dabney were appointed a committee to wait upon the trustees of the city schools and urge the establishment of a domestic training class in the schools. Also to express to the trustees the League's endorsement of their having established a manual training class.

The League has determined to make the Better Babies feature of the approaching fair one of the most attractive events of the week. Mrs. Geo. Kolb is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Jouett Henry, who is to distribute the cards to applicants, will be prepared to do so in a day or two. The "baby show" is scheduled for Tuesday, the first day of the fair.

Mrs. Frank Yost, the President of the League, has issued a call to all the ladies of Hopkinsville asking them to assist the League in bringing about an early closing hour on Saturday nights.

HARD AT WORK

Water Co. Building Large Filter Basin.

The patrons of the Water Company who complain of the water being muddy must remember that the company is doing all it can to have the contractors complete the large filter basin as soon as possible. The cause of the water being muddy is due to the fact that the consumption of water is greater than the capacity to filter it before it is forced through the mains. When the big filtration pool is completed the company will be able to render the most efficient service. Until then the patrons will have to "let patience do her perfect work."

Fine Horses Sold.

Dr. M. W. Williams attended the sale of the entire stud of the late J. R. Keene at New York last Tuesday, with the view of procuring a successor to the famous Cyclades, which died about three weeks ago. It was not known yesterday whether Dr. Williams bought or not.

THE COLLEGES ARE READY

Bethel Female College Opened Yesterday For the Registration.

PROSPECTS ARE FLATTERING

McLean Opens Its Doors Next Tuesday and Large Enrollment Anticipated.

Bethel Female College was opened for registration yesterday. The indications point to a most flattering year, but the formal opening will not take place for a few days.

McLean college opens its doors next Tuesday. A large enrollment of young ladies and gentlemen is anticipated.

Both colleges have a splendid corps of teachers and a prosperous year is confidently expected by the heads of both institutions.

CUTTING TOBACCO

Many Farmers Say They Have Fine Crops.

Some tobacco was cut last week and many farmers are using the knife freely this week. Next week a large proportion of the crop will be taken care of.

From the best information obtainable this year's yield will prove to be of exceptional fine quality. The old cry of, "the worms are eating up my crop and I can't get hands to save it" is no longer heard, since farmers have so generally begun the use of Paris green. Day hands who often could not be hired at a time when most needed are no longer in a position to make unreasonable demands, but are able to get but a few days work in cases of emergency. Of course this applies only to those who will not make a yearly contract.

$10,000 FIRE

Town Hall and Six Business Houses Destroyed at Trenton.

Fire, starting in the pressing room of a negro at Trenton, about midnight Monday, caused a loss of from $8,000 to $10,000. The town hall and half a dozen business houses were eaten up by the flames before they were gotten under control. The firms burned out were: Chas. Holman, livery stable; R. B. McGee, blacksmith and woodworking shop; R. E. Morphe, grocery; Henderson Neblett, pressing shop; two negro restaurants. By heroic efforts of the citizens the fire was kept from the main business part of the town. The insurance carried on buildings and contents aggregated $4,050, about half the loss.

Death of Mrs. Mary Utley.

Mrs. Mary L. Utley died Tuesday morning at her home on North Virginia street, after an illness of several weeks of a complication of diseases, aged fifty-four years. She was a daughter of the late Daniel Coleman and was a member of the Christian church. Two daughters survive. Her funeral services were held yesterday afternoon and the interment took place in Riverside cemetery.

$50 Per Acre.

C. M. Keatts bought Mr. and Mrs. A. Southall's farm in the Southern part of the county, paying $50 per acre for the 120 acres. Though the farm is in two tracts, at the present price of South Christian land $50 per acre may be considered cheap.

Growing in Favor.

The water from the well located on the farm of Luther H. Smithson, near Church Hill, is growing in favor every day. The most obstinate cases of indigestion, constipation and stomach trouble are yielding to the medical qualities of this water by a few days use. Probably half the people who say they have "heart trouble" have nothing but indigestion, sometimes manifestly in an acute form. Try the water from Mr. Smithson's well for for a few days and test its virtues for yourself. He delivers it your home at 12 1/2 cents a gallon.

Among the many who are using it with beneficial effects we mention:

What Puzzled Him.

"What are you puzzling about?"
"I'm writing a sketch for vaudeville

High, But Not Too High.

"I suppose you wouldn't believe," said the manager, "that it cost me

"I'm surprised that they let you do it even for that price."

HISTORIC OLD ENGLISH SPOT

Horace Walpole's Home at Twickenham One of the Most Interesting Places in the Country.

Twickenham ferry, for the honor of rowing its across which the earl of Dysart is now contending with a rival in the law courts, once had a subterranean competitor, says the London Chronicle. This took the form of a tunnel from the manor house of Twitnam (as the riverside village used to be called) to Ham house on the Surrey side. But history has for a long time failed to keep a record of its use or site. Probably no ferry in the world—except Charon's—has carried more illustrious passengers than that of Twickenham. Pope, Walpole, exiled French kings and their glittering train of guests made the place in the eighteenth century the haunt of "fashion and the muses."

When Walpole bought his Twickenham house from the toy woman, Mrs. Chevenix, he found it to be the "prettiest bauble you ever saw." One remembers his happy description of the small Euphrates that rolled by his windows and of the two delightful roads, dusty, but alive with coaches and chaises. "Barges as solemn as barons of the exchequer move under my windows. Richmond Hill and Ham walks bound my prospects; but, thank God, the Thames is between me and the duchess of Queensberry! Dowagers, as plenty as flounders, inhabit all around, and Pope's ghost is just now skimming under my window by a most poetical moonlight."

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is history, it is romance, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

BEYOND KEN OF WHITE MEN

Sorcery as Practiced in Southern Nigeria Remains a Mystery Despite Investigation.

The sorcery of southern Nigeria is still very much of a mystery to the white man. To be sure, he knows that when a native is Ju-Ju'd, or "called," and promptly dies, there is some good explanation (good, that is, in the sense of natural) of the fatality. But whether the Ju-Ju deaths are psychological, the result of suggestion in a grossly superstitious brain, or have some more material cause in the shape of poison cleverly and secretly administered, he cannot say. Mr. E. Dayrell, a district commissioner in that benighted country, who has made a special study of the folklore and unique superstitions of the region, has recently published a series of Ikrom folk-stories and some new observations on human sacrifices and Ju-Ju.

He throws no new light, however, on the explanation of Ju-Ju's efficacy. It seems incredible, he says, that a young and healthy native can die because a Ju-Ju has been made against him—"for example, two sticks crossed on the path, with, say, a rotten egg and a fowl stuck on a stick, the man's name having been called." And yet there are numerous instances where to all appearances this primitive Mumbo-Jumbo has struck down its victims as certainly as a stroke of lightning. Mr. Dayrell suggests a poison explanation, but says proof of his theory is difficult to get, and apparently he has none to offer in its support.—New York Evening Post.

WOULDN'T THIS JAR?

"Don't you think I dress well?" "I certainly do, and I have heard it said that if you were as pretty as your dresses you would be a good-looking woman."

PHOTOGRAPHING THE AURORA.

Professor Stormer and Dr. Birke-land spent the months of February and March at Bosekop, in northern Norway, making photographs of the aurora, continuing the remarkable work of two years ago. As in the previous case, photographs have been taken simultaneously from two stations about 2½ miles apart, connected by telephone, in order to furnish means of computing the distance and altitude of the aurora.

IN FOR IT.

"Perceval," she said, looking up at him shyly, "mother says you mustn't stay later than eleven o'clock." "Why, Mildred," he gasped. "I had no intention of staying later than nine."

NO USE.

"I never look at the weather signal on a steeple to see if a fine day is coming." "Why not?" "Because it is a vane hope."

GRIM HUMOR.

Aged Uncle—I've insured my life for $5,000 in your favor; what else can I do for you? Nephew—Nothing on earth, uncle.—Boston Transcript.

PICKING UP.

"How's collections at your church, Brudder Hambone?" "Much better since we got a one-armed man to pass de plate."

FAMILY RESEMBLANCE.

Farmer—That's the mother of those seven pigs. Visitor—So I see. They are all so like her in the face.

HIM AND HER.

"Have you learned to swim?" "Not this year. Will you teach me?"

ENTENTE CORDIALE

"We really ought to ask Cousin Sue and her fiance to dinner soon," said Olive, with a little sigh. "It's several weeks now since the engagement was announced."

"Yes," agreed mother briskly; "Sue's been like one of our own since she was a little girl, though we haven't seen much of her lately; and his folks being connected with father's business ought to make us all the more interested. Let's get the thing settled this evening. I wish we knew more about him and his family, the little I've heard gave me the impression that they were all sort of uppity. I guess I got the notion from you, father."

"Shouldn't wonder," said father, rousing himself from the evening paper. "I don't know Robert, Sue's young man, but his father and Frank, the brother—well, the old gentleman's pretty set in his ways, and a regular old fuss-budget, especially about his food, and I guess Frank is like him—eh, Tom?"

"Sure thing!" Tom contributed; "we lunch together sometimes, and his discourses on the subject of eats are something choice. The poor chap has indigestion, though, which helps make him fussy, I suppose. I only see Bob once in a while, for he travels mostly, so I never had a chance to get a line on his views."

"Well," observed mother, getting back to the main topic, "about this dinner. Shall we call it next Wednesday?" The family thoughtfully searched for previous engagements, and finally assented to the proposed date. "That's easy," said Olive; "and now the really important question comes: what shall we have? Consomme, for a starter; one can't go wrong on that. And next—roast beef, mother?"

"Cut it out!" exclaimed Tom. "Old Smiley won't have beef in the house, since the packing house element got into literature; Frank told me so." A moment of thought, then mother suggested that roast chickens were always nice.

"Guess again," suggested his father, sitting up and looking interested. "It comes to me now that old Smiley told me they once had a Jap cook who could curry fowl in Indian style; and since Hashimura went back home it seems that the family can't endure the thought of common garden chicken—never touch it any more."

"And Frank," added Tom, "once confided to me that they never had sheep in any form on the home table, or pork either. Goodness knows what they do eat! Frank takes only limpid sawdust food at luncheon. Gee, mother, you are up against it! The trouble is, folks like that are always sure to detest what they don't like. And Bob—maybe he'll be worse yet, after a couple of months in Paris. Say, we couldn't work a theater party, and a restaurant supper afterward, could we—to sort of shift the responsibility, and not betray ourselves as plain Americans, who once lived in the country?"

"We might, if we had French restaurant and grand opera incomes!" Olive reminded him with scorn.

"Besides, Sue wouldn't like it; she's a homey thing, like ourselves, and if we did anything formal she'd think we didn't want to let Mr. Smiley into the family circle. Next time I see her perhaps I can get a few points about his preferences, if I'm tactful, so we can touch his heart through the traditional avenue."

"A good idea," mother approved. "I want to make him like us, and feel at home, for Sue's sake, though we're such plain folks, it's not much use to pretend—" She was interrupted by the ringing of the door-bell and a moment later Sue herself was ushered in, laughing and rosy, and behind her a tall, good-looking youth, whose slight reserve might have been due to shyness or to conscious superiority.

"Thought we'd drop in," Sue explained airily, "and give Bobs a chance to get acquainted. He's only seen his in-laws at teas and such stuffy places, where folks aren't like themselves, and I do want him to know my bestest cousins. Bobs, you've heard me speak of Aunt Sarah—she gave me that book of grandmother's recipes. And wait till you taste her molasses cookies!"

A general laugh set them more at ease, and Tom and Olive noted with approval a twinkle of unmistakable humor in Robert's brown eyes. It suggested to Olive a daring idea, to which she impulsively gave expression a few moments later. "I'm so glad you two happened in," she remarked, "for we were just planning a home dinner for you, and trying to decide what you'd like best; so now the easiest way is just to pin you down and make you choose your own menu!"

Sue clapped her hands. "What a gorgeous idea!" she laughed; "only I'm going to make Bobs do it all, and if he leaves out anything, or puts in anything I don't like, I'll amend the constitution later." The young man laughingly protested, but the family joined Sue with great cordiality, mother suggesting that Mr. Smiley could no-doubt give them some new ideas from Paris.

"Mr. Smiley," returned Robert with spirit, "consigns Parisian eats to—ahem!—Paris. I say, do you really mean it—and will you promise not to be shocked? It's offering a chance to a desperate man, for our folks—well, their conception of perfectly good food isn't always mine. First, then, I choose—pork and beans," mused Rob, thoughtfully, while the faces about him showed various stages of amazement. "Then—I wish I dared say boiled onions; but that would be too much, wouldn't it—Aunt Sarah? Really? Oh, that's bully! Thanks! And brown bread—I think you make it in a double boiler, don't you? But I'm sure I'm choosing too many things—and maybe they don't make a good ensemble. Father's so particular about the ensemble—"

"Go on!" cried the family, with enthusiasm, and he did, while Tom asked wonderingly, "How on earth did you hit our own favorites—or, suspiciously, 'are you just being polite?'"

The visitor laughed. "Not a bit of it! You see, I was the youngest, and I spent a lot of time with Grandmother Brown on the farm, while the rest of 'em were educating their tastes, as they called it, in town, so it's me for the good old things, every time. Now, Sue, it's your turn." She supplemented his selections with a few of her own favorites, and an equally fine disregard of the ensemble, and after a jolly half hour the two took their leave, Robert highly pleased with his prospective relatives. And as father closed the shutters and put out the lights he observed to mother, "A nice, sensible young man! Sue's fortunate to get him!" Olive, half-way up the stairs, cautioned mother to look up the recipe for molasses cookies, to be sure of perfection on the important occasion, while Tom, from the upper floor, put in a plea: "And say, mother, he's a person of discrimination, and I'll bet he likes sauerkraut, too; can't we have some, for the what-you-callam—ongtree, you know?"—Buffalo Express.

OUTDONE.

Says an exchange: "This sentence contains the entire alphabet: 'Pack my box with five dozen liquor jugs.' Thirty-two letters. Can you beat it?" Beat it? Easily! Our sentence is "Look, here's pi: czamqcybwngvjudftz." Only twenty-eight letters.

ITS CLASSIFICATION.

"What a gossip place this boarding house is! Everybody wants to know about everybody else's business."

"Yes, I understand the engineer who is staying here, calls it a regular pumping station."

HIS ART.

"There is a magic about a proud and influential man which can furnish material for sport whenever he desires it so."

"How is that?" "Because he can make men quail."

ADVANTAGES.

"Truth," said the ready-made philosopher, "is stranger than fiction."

"Yes," replied the man with a bunch of picture-cover magazines, "and so much cheaper!"—Washington Evening Star.

UNUSUAL.

"What is the baby crying about?" "He dropped his ginger snap in his glass of water."

"Well, that's the first time I ever knew anyone to cry because they had a soft snap."

THE AFTERMATH.

"Daughter and her beau must have had a terrible quarrel."

"Why so, ma?" "Five pounds of candy, a bunch of roses and two matinee tickets have just arrived."

'RUTH'S PRISONER'

Comedy of Errors That Proved Not at All Humorous to Miss Cynthia.

Nodding pleasantly to Miss Cynthia and waving their hands to their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Foster drove out of the yard. They were going to Rochester, where Mr. Foster expected to buy some fine cattle and Mrs. Foster had some shopping to do. When their business was finished they expected to spend the night with their married daughter and return home the next day.

"Well," remarked Miss Cynthia, as the buggy disappeared around a bend in the road, "they have quite a treat before them, no mistake. They don't get off very often, now, do they?" Ruth Foster shook her head.

"Mother will think it the greatest kind of a treat to have one whole evening with Margaret; they haven't had an evening together for nearly a year."

"That's so," agreed Miss Cynthia, "and now I'm glad I didn't mention about that burglar before they went, for your Ma would have been sure to worry some. You see, there's been a burglar over to Laconia, and he broke a bank over there somewhere, and the officers are after him. I heard down to the postoffice that he was a-headed this way. They've got a paper posted up there, that says he is a tallish young man with a smooth face and mejum complexion and blue eyes." Ruth Foster laughed merrily.

"Let him come, Miss Cynthia, I do not believe he will bother you or me."

"The first of my boarders is coming tonight, a little early for summer boarders, but it is that Mr. Stanton I told you about, from New York, you know, so I'm all right. But you poor child, you will be all alone, now that John's away and your Pa and Ma are off to Rochester. You had better come up and stay with me tonight." But Ruth was not disturbed in the least, and refusing Miss Cynthia's kindly offer she went about her work singing to herself. When it was time she did the evening chores and closed the house, then she sat on the doorstep for nearly an hour enjoying the sweet spring twilight and listening to the singing of the frogs in the willow brook.

On reaching home Miss Cynthia took a final peep into the room prepared for the expected guest, and then, when she had finished the last bit of cooking, she set the table for tea.

"The train gets in at about ten minutes to seven, and Jason Hodges will have him up here in about three flips of a fly's wing, and if he should take it into his head to walk 'twouldn't make him but a few minutes later," mused the good lady as she bustled about, and when, a few minutes after seven, a tired-looking young man with a dark beard, and carrying a heavy traveling bag came up the walk she hurried to the door and held out her hand.

"Howdy-do, Mr. Stanton," she said, "you are welcome, but why in the world didn't you get Jason Hodges to drive you up? I told him to be on the lookout for you on the train tonight, when I got your letter; but come right in, your supper and room are both ready."

After sitting on the doorstep for a long time listening to the wood notes and the frogs, Ruth Foster went into the house, intending to return in a minute or two. When she did she was horrified to find a young man standing on the step—"a tallish young man of mejum complexion"—she could see that, even in the twilight. When he saw her he took off his hat and asked if Mr. Foster was at home. Ruth told him her father was not at home, and then as soon as she said so she was sorry.

"Can I come in and rest?" he asked, when he found that she did not ask him in. Ruth hesitated. "Come in," she said at last; she felt that it would never do to let this robber see that she was afraid of him.

After she had lighted a lamp he asked if he might trouble her for something to eat. He had had no supper. There had been no restaurant at the station or village, and he was rather hungry. Ruth sat the table and then, as the kettle was singing merrily, she handed him a plate and asked him to fill it with doughnuts from a crock which she pointed out to him, in the pantry, while she made the tea. He went into the pantry and was filling the plate with the beautifully browned doughnuts when Ruth slammed the door and locked and bolted it.

"Now, Mr. Burglar," she cried, "if you really are hungry you can eat those doughnuts, but you shall not get out until papa or John comes home."

She went into the sitting room and tried to read. For a long time she heard the man pounding on the door and calling to her, but finally all was still. She knew the man could not get out, because of the heavy bars on the pantry window. The night dragged slowly, and eventually she slept, to be awakened in the morning by John, the hired man, rapping at the door and calling to her. As she let him in, she told him of her adventure.

"He is in there now, John; get some rope and we will tie him and you can take him to jail." John did as he was bid and then unfasted the door.

"Good gracious," he cried, "it's Mr. Morton; he was down here from college with your brother Bob, last summer, while you were away, Ruth, and your father told me he expected him again next week."

"Yes, it was my intention to come next week, but I have to go west with a mining expedition next week, and therefore wrote Mr. Foster that I would be down last night, but my letter must have miscarried, for I see that Miss Foster does not know me and has heard nothing of my intended visit. She would not listen to me after she locked me in. Before that I supposed she knew who I was." Poor Ruth was so mortified; it was a long time before Robert Morton ceased to call himself "Ruth's prisoner."

Miss Cynthia's night was adventurous, also. When she went to call her "boarder" the next morning she found an empty room, an empty sideboard in the dining room, and an empty purse in her work basket. As she stood in the doorway, a horrified expression on her face, Jason Hodges brought her a telegram from the real Mr. Stanton, saying that he could not come quite as early as he expected, but that he would come the next week.

"It wouldn't have happened if that paper in front of the postoffice hadn't lied," she declared; "it said 'a tallish young man of mejum complexion,' and I calk'date no man can grow a great black beard like that in two days, so now."

CLEARING HIMSELF.

Sambo—Dat so? Why, Lawdy, judge! Yo' jest send for mah wife, an' make her leave de washin' and come hyah. Vis'ble? Huh! She weighs 300 pounds. I guess she's vis'ble, all right."

CAUSE FOR ANGER.

Mr. Wilkins was near the exploding point when his neighbor met him on the street.

"That man Tompkins," he burst out, "has more nerve than anyone I ever met!"

"Why?" asked his neighbor curiously.

"He came over to my house last evening and borrowed my gun to kill a dog that kept him awake nights."

"Well, what of that?"

"Why," shouted Mr. Wilkins, "it was my dog he killed!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

"But you are not married?"

"Nope, I have the gift of second sight."

JOKE THAT AVERTED TRAGEDY

Comedian Proved to Be the Right Man in the Right Place on This Occasion.

Natural aptitude to grasp a situation has been turned to account more than once on the stage, and in one case, if the veracity of a favorite comedian goes for anything, it saved a panic and possible loss of life.

"We were playing one-night stands," said he, "in Kansas during the terrible period of cyclones, and found ourselves in a large, dilapidated building called by courtesy a theater."

"The low comedian was on the stage in the part of a drunken husband receiving a vigorous lecture from his wife. 'Madam,' he had just observed, 'if you keep on you'll talk the roof off,' when there was a roar heard, followed by a tremendous crash, the building swaying like a tree in a storm. The people jumped to their feet, for they saw the roof had been carried away. They were about to turn and make a dash for the exits when the comedian, coming down to the footlights, looked up into the air and quick as a flash he turned to the lady and said: 'There! What did I tell you?'

"The audience howled with laughter, and the quick-witted comedian was undoubtedly the means of preventing a serious calamity."

USUALLY THE WAY

Wickson—So all this suburban place belongs to a building and loan association, eh? What is their method?

Dickson—Why, they'll build you any kind of a house you don't want and let you pay for it whenever you aren't ready.

TOBACCO, OIL, ETC.

"The trusts dissolve," said Senator Robinson at a banquet in London. "The trusts dissolve, and they offer us irrefutable proof of their dissolution. This irrefutable proof, however, is a good deal like the dealer's."

"A woman in the spring bought a moth-proof chest of a dealer, and early in July she came back to the man in a terrible rage."

"You said this chest was moth-proof," she cried. "Look at these sables—you'd think they'd been dipped in acid. Look at my poor husband's dress coat—the tail resembles a sieve. And here is my lovely chinchilla stole, bald in patches as big as your hand. And you assured me that the chest was moth-proof."

"Well, madam," said the dealer, "what further proof of moths do you require?"

TOBACCO USER.

"Do you use tobacco in any form?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "I neither smoke it nor chew it. But for the purpose of an anti-trust argument to impress my constituents, I must say tobacco is one of the handiest things I know of."

DISCOURAGED.

"Aren't you going to say your prayers, Willie?"

"No, I'm not. I am tired of praying for this family without getting any results."—Life.

SEE GENESIS I. 2.

She—It's odd we should talk about the mouth of a river.

He—Why so? Haven't you ever read about the face of the waters?

HARD ORDER.

"Waiter bring me an infinitesimal portion of cheese."

"Ain't got any of that kind in the house, sir. Only cream cheese."

MONEY TALKS.

"What do I say at the wedding?"

"Not a word, dad. All you utter is the check."

MAN HAS ABNORMAL MEMORY

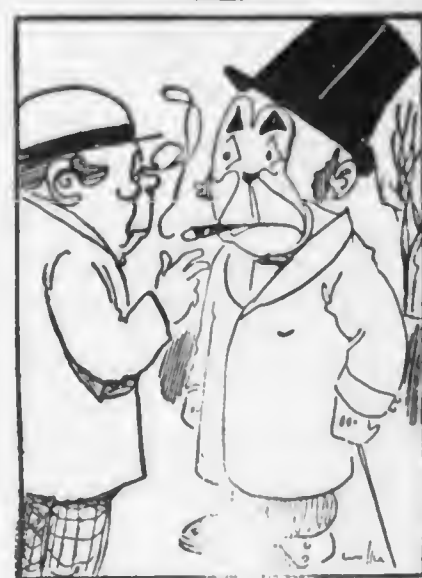

Illiterate English Laborer Whose Feats Have Recently Been Causing Much Astonishment.

George Harbottle, a laborer at a Northumberland quarry, possesses a memory which retains an indelible impression of every word which he hears or reads, says the Northwestern Gazette. After once hearing read, or reading himself, half a dozen book pages of any kind of matter, he can repeat them without omitting a single word.

One one occasion a man who knew Harbottle bought a pamphlet of songs from a street singer, and wagered him that he could not, within 20 minutes, learn and correctly repeat all the songs. Harbottle repeated every song without a mistake in 17 minutes. The names of all the licensed houses in Glasgow were read out to him three times and he repeated them correctly in the reverse order in which they were read out. Two men read two different paragraphs from two newspapers simultaneously and Harbottle repeated one paragraph correctly and made only two mistakes in the other—a remarkable feat. His foreman one day showed him a book containing the record of his seven workmates for eight months. It was at the dinner hour and the men were all sitting in a group. In ten minutes, from memory, Harbottle told each man what he had done and the wages he had earned during each week of the previous eight months.

Being an illiterate man, he can do nothing with figures, but otherwise his abnormal power seems to triumph over the most severe tests to which it can be put.

BAD ONE

Doyle—Do you get the flavor of that cigar, Boyle?

Boyle—Sure, I could smell the weed wid me eyes shut.

HARSH JUDGMENT.

"In eastern countries men buy their wives."

"I've seen some in this country that looked as if they were acquired at a remnant sale."—Courier Journal.

A TURN OF PHRASE.

Cigar Smoker (facetiously)—Still studying the professor? You must know it by the down by now.

The Professor (feelingly)—Say, rather, inside out!—London Sketch.

NOT SO FAR WRONG.

"This booby has been telling me about an aviary meeting he attended lately."

"Well, it was a meeting of bird-men, wasn't it?"

NO CASH NEEDED.

"You can have that property for a song."

"You don't mean that literally."

"Yes, I do. I'll take your notes."

POOR KIND OF SPORT.

"Rogers is a bit of a sportsman, isn't he?"

"If going off on wild goose chases makes a fellow one, he is."

SWEET.

Mollie—How many lumps of sugar shall I put in your coffee?

Chollie—Oh, have your own sweet way, as usual, dear.

WHY SHE ENJOYS GOLF.

"Do you enjoy golf?"

"Very much. It keeps my husband out of my way most of the time."

PAW KNOWS EVERYTHING.

Willie—Paw, what is war indemnity?

Paw—Alimony, my dear.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly.

No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So Low a Price.

This is a time of great events and you will want the news accurately and promptly. The Democrats, for the first time in sixteen years, will have the Presidency and they will have the Presidency and they will also control both branches of Congress. The political news is sure to be of the most absorbing interest.

There is a great war in the Old World, and you may read of the extinction of the vast Turkish Empire in Europe, just as a few years ago you read how Spain lost her last foothold in America, after having ruled the empire of half the New World.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. The Thrice-a-Week World also abounds in other strong features: serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Hopkinsville-Kentuckian together for one year for $2.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

WHICH IS MORE FASTIDIOUS?

One Man Claims the Masculine Sex is More Enamored of Neatness Than the Feminine.

"Have you ever asked yourself this question?" asked a perceiving young man. "I have come to the conclusion that in many things they are and more particularly about food and table appointments. Perhaps this is because women are habituated to the seamy side of cookery, to the sight of uncooked articles. Men see only the results of all these processes, some of them disagreeable enough, whereas even the most fastidious mistress sometimes, however reluctantly, comes upon the basement operators in the midst of a far from esthetic task. The gilded youth of today is a most terribly fastidious person. His chief cult is sensitive nerves and his 'culture' seems a heinous offense. I was made to think about these things the other day when 'Jim,' speaking about a girl whose acquaintance he had lately made, agreed that she was very pretty, very attractive, etc., but," he added, "I don't like looking at her. Her hair is never tidy; pieces of it stream down at the back, and there is something about the back of her waist that is disorderly." I give you his own masculine expressions. I fancy neatness appeals immensely to men. Soiled gloves, crushed handkerchiefs, untidy footgear, have done more to disillusion the masculine creature than the culprits who permit themselves these disorders can ever imagine.

BY-PRODUCT OF MUCH VALUE

Innumerable Uses to Which Sawdust May Be Put Are Astonishing to Men Who Have Not Known.

The family man, who occasionally indulges in home carpentering, knows full well how sawdust seems to work into every crevice, to cling to one's clothes, and to make itself a general nuisance.

But, despised though sawdust may be, it is a by-product with many uses. Used as an absorbent for nitroglycerine, it produces dynamite. Used with clay, and burned, it produces a fireproof brick that makes excellent and very durable material for building work.

Sawdust mixed with some suitable binding material and compressed makes splendid molding and imitation earwings, whilst if mingled with Portland cement it produces a most lasting material for floors.

Hollow walls that one desires to make sound-proof, or proof against frost, may be packed with sawdust, and as a material for protecting fragile articles in transit there is nothing better. Sawdust is used as a non-conductor of heat in which to pack in all the large icehouses.

PROGRESS ON CAPE COD CANAL.

It is estimated that the 25,000,000 tons of shipping which rounds Cape Cod during the year will be so far benefited by the opening of the Cape Cod canal that it will be perfectly willing to pay a toll for the use of the canal. The 11,000,000 tons of coal shipped annually to eastern ports will find the inner and sheltered route of great advantage, and probably the greater part of this, or such part as is carried in barges, will avail itself of the canal.

NOT MUCH ON HIS MIND.

"Dobble should be a happy man." "Why do you think he should be a happy man?" "Because the most serious problem that confronts him now is whether to buy summer union suits or two-piece garments."

DIFFERENT PLACE.

"Pop, doctors don't bleed people like they used to, do they?" "No, sonny; they do it now in their bills."

ITS UNCERTAINTY.

"It is not always certain to tell the fruit of a political deal." "No, it may be a lemon or it may be a plum."

THAT'S SO!

"It's very odd." "What?" "That a fellow isn't in the swim when society throws him overboard."

ANOTHER FIRE HORROR.

"Have you found out what started the blaze in that broom factory?" "Not yet; but we're making a sweeping investigation."

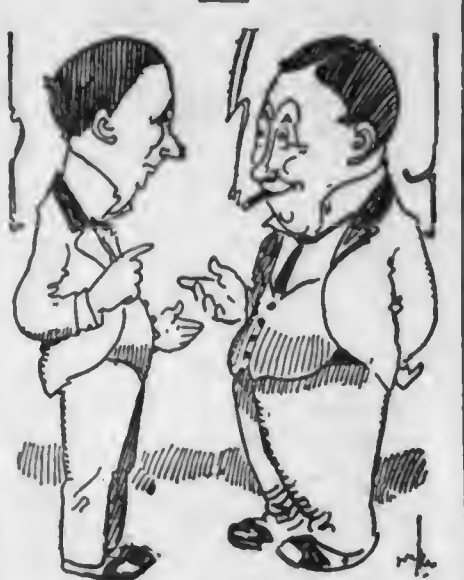

BRAWNY BOATMEN OF PERU

They Looked Like Egyptian Galley Slaves to a Traveler in South America.

Harbors there are none from Guayaquil (Ecuador) to Callao (Peru), the ships anchoring about a half mile off shore, a fact that in these peaceful waters entails neither the discomforts nor inconveniences that it does on other coasts. Here at Eten we hoisted our new passengers aboard in a sort of car like those used in roller coasters, four people at a time, writes Ernest Peixotto in Scribner's. Freight is transferred in lighters which they call lanchas. Even before we had been "received" by the captain of the port several of these could be seen approaching us.

How can I describe them? They are about the size of a sea-going schooner. Five heavy beams laid across the bow form seats for ten men, whose brawny arms and well-developed deltoids and pectorals would do honor to trained athletes. Their type—the broad, flat face, the high cheek bone, the narrow eyes set apart and the drooping mustache—plainly show their descent from the Chimu, that strange Chinese race whose civilization seems to have centered about Trujillo, somewhat farther down the coast. Clad only in Jerseys and trousers, bareheaded or shaded by wide-rimmed straw hats, each lays hold of a gigantic sweep, five on a side. And how they row, wing and wing, throwing the whole weight of their mighty frames upon the oars, rising in their seats till standing—the only boatmen I ever saw who suggested the galley slaves of the Egyptians or the men who manned the Roman triremes!

BARGAIN INSTINCT

"I hear Miss De Rocks is engaged to the duke. Do you think it was a case of love on her part?" "No; it's another case of the feminine bargain instinct. The duke's first figures were $200,000, but he dropped to $198,000."

FRENCH PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

The physical education of the youth of France is soon to be taken in hand and properly directed. There is already, and there has been for some time, a steadily growing enthusiasm among the boys of the country for athletics, but this enthusiasm, unless properly regulated, is not calculated to produce anything like the best results. M. Gabriel Benvalot is at the head of an important and popular movement which has for its object the proper direction of the physical education of the French youth.

MISTREATING THE HELPLESS.

"I see by the papers that a woman says her husband spanked her every time she got drunk." "What do you think of a man who would do that?" "I think he took an unfair advantage. He might at least have waited until she got sober."

OUR LANGWIDGE.

She—Why do you call Mr. Gruff a blunt man? He—Because he is always saying sharp things.

WHAT TO WEAR.

"George is going to take me to my first baseball game this afternoon. What would you advise me to wear?" "An air of silence."

GAVE HER HIS WORD.

"She thinks he is her ideal man." "Now, what in the world ever made her think that?" "He told her he was."

WHO WOULDN'T?

Gibbs—It costs more to live than it did a hundred years ago. Dibbs—All the same, I wouldn't like to be one of those who lived then.

SHIPPER AVOID A TRAGEDY

Would Let None of His Hogs Be Shot, at Least While He Was There to Prevent It.

Sam Blank of Blank Center, Kan., raises hogs. He ships to the Kansas City market. Along last year Mr. Blank painfully observed that on nearly every shipment he received notice that one or more hogs died on the trip to market. He discussed the matter with his neighbors and they advised him.

"Loky 'ere, Sam," they told him. "The fellows up at the stock yards in Kansas City are stealing and killing your hogs and getting money out of them. You better go along next time and watch."

When shipping time came, Sam, wary and vigilant, accompanied his hogs to market.

To avoid confusion among so many carloads of cattle the stockyards company has a checking system. The yardmen look over the cars, note where they are from, the numbers of the cars, and what chute the stock will be consigned to. They turn this memoranda over to the salesman.

Suspicious Sam was on hand when a yardman looked over his car.

"Carload of hogs from Blank, Kan.," the yardman sang out to the memorandum clerk. "Car No. 3187. Chute 8!"

That was what Sam was waiting for. He was on his feet like a Jack in the box.

"Not on your life," he shouted. "I'm onto you fellers. You don't shoot a darned hair off their backs."

What happened thereupon has not been recorded.—Kansas City Star.

TOO LATE

He—Would you be satisfied with love in a cottage? She—A cottage? Not for me. He—I'm sorry. My cottage is at Newport. I'm sorry, indeed. Good-by.

EXPERIMENT JUSTIFIED.

That there is a marked improvement in the general health of school children, since medical inspection of schools was made a rule, although many suffer from defective sight and teeth, is stated in a report made by Dr. Laberge, assistant medical health officer, Montreal. Dr. Laberge also states that infectious diseases are less prevalent, while skin diseases have practically vanished. He argues that much of this is due to close medical inspection, and to the willingness of principals and teachers to aid the inspection.

APPRECIATES CUCUMBERS.

In Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt, cucumbers are truly appreciated. They are developed to their utmost. Sometimes they reach a length of two and a half feet, and they are much eaten and liked by the natives. Moreover, the beautiful women of these cities understand the value of cucumber juice, and it is squeezed out of the huge green vegetable for them to use a lotion for the skin.

HAD TO STOP.

"Why did you make your building only twelve stories high?" "Couldn't lease any offices on the thirteenth floor."

ACCOUNTED FOR.

"Why did Adam and Eve name their first child Cain?" "I suppose they did it after they found out what they were raising."

DOMESTIC FRANKNESS.

Pet—Do you think I'd look better if I had my beard shaved off? Dearest—Of course not; just when your face is almost covered?—Puck.

ON HIS WAY.

Old Doctor (who has been gossiping for three-quarters of an hour)—Well, well, I must be going. I've got to visit an old lady in a fit.—Punch.

English System of Handling Baggage Worries an American.

Views of Woman Writer Who Objects to Briton's Mild Answer to Criticism, the Said Answer Usually Being "Oh, Really?"

Except for people with pennies in hand the sanitary conveniences and decencies of this great terminal (and of most railroad stations in England) are an outrage upon all refinement, according to Margaret Deland in the Ladies' Home Journal. "And as for their baggage system," the American says bitterly—but words fail him to say what he thinks of that. "Why do they put up with this sort of thing?"
he says to his party that first day while they wait interminably for their trunks in Euston station. After a while his gathering steam of irritation bursts out in an ejaculation to the porter who stands beside him with a handbarrow all ready for the trunks that are somewhere in a pile of luggage that is spreading itself out on the platform, awaiting identification by more or less patient owners.

"In our country," he says, "we check our baggage—luggage I mean.
All we have to do is to show our checks, the baggage men do the rest.
We never stand around the way you people do, looking for it."

To which the porter replies: "Really, sir?"
Nor does his calm person, who makes his living by the inconvenience, show any discomposure at the growing discomposure of the women in the cue:

"Papa, when are you going to get the trunks?"
"Uncle, how slow they are!"

"My dear, you can identify your trunks easily; they all have a large D."

The American, between closed teeth: "Big, big 'D'!"
The porter doesn't notice the explosion. He knows that the trunks will be found shortly. Why should he fuss because the Americans fuss? And why do they fuss because the trunks are found in twenty minutes instead of ten? In the long run what difference do twenty, or even thirty minutes make? Perhaps the porter ponders over this in his waiting silence.
Probably he comes to no other conclusion than that it is the American "way"—like boasting or chewing gum, or letting the women order the men about.

"We've been here an hour!" the youngest girl says despairingly, and the porter looks at her and then at the clock—twenty-three minutes! But what can you expect from an American?

"I'm afraid we'll lose our rooms at the hotel," the tired stout woman says. "You know you wrote them we would arrive at 3."

The porter almost smiles. How foolish they are, these American women!
But though he may be thus summing up he is alert enough when the prodded, badgered head of the family, who has at last climbed into the luggage van, and, by dint of striking matches (for the little car is perfectly dark) and leaping over other people's trunks, succeeds in locating his own.

"These your boxes, sir?" the porter says smartly. The next minute he is trundling off an enormous load of baggage—trunks, grips, hat boxes, hold-alls.

The irate American strides after him, and behind him comes the jostling party of his womankind. Why did they all fuss so? The baggage was procured. The hotel had not given their rooms to anybody else. Probably this is what the porter thinks and does not say. The travelers, however, in their impatience, do not do much thinking, but they say a good deal, and all to the same effect: "How stupid not to have our baggage system!"

For the first few days they say it to English friends, but they find themselves gradually silenced by the silent English smile, or if the friends make any comment it is only out of patient kindliness, and it is just as silencing:
"Papa says our system would save all the trouble you people have with your baggage. He says your system isn't in it with ours."

"Oh, really?" says the listener politely.

Obedient Orders.

"Now remember, Mary," began Miss Helle, "I am at home this afternoon to no one but Mr. Van Brownkins.
If anyone else should call I am not at home. You understand?"

"Oh, yes, miss," replied Mary.
Half an hour later Mary reappear-ed, evidently worried about something.

"If you please, miss," she began.
"I've told three lady callers and one gentleman called that you were at home to none except Mr. Brownkins, and they all went away very angry, indeed, miss. Will you—"

But the "not at home" had fainted.

Cannibal's Dish.

"My dear, listen to this and tell me what you make of it!" exclaimed the elderly English lady to her husband on her first visit to the states.

She held the hotel menu almost at arm's length and spoke in a tone of horror.

"Baked Indian pudding!" And it became possible in a civilized country?"—

PALESTINE A CITY OF JOY

Lecturer Says Jews Go There to Live and Pray, Not to Die in Its Ruins.

"Zionism comes to us in these later days as the only solution to the Jewish question, the only method that comes to the modern Jew to make his Judaism once more operative as of yore," said Miss Henrietta Szold recently in an address before the Philadelphia section of the council of Jewish women at the Benjamin F. Teller Memorial schoolhouse on
"The New Palestine."

"The Palestine of today," said Miss Szold, according to the Philadelphia Ledger, "is not a city of ruin. It is a city of song and not of mourning. People now go to Palestine to live and pray, not to pray and die."

"Zionism is not a palliative, nor a specific, but a final solution of the Jewish problem. It did not expect all the Jews to go to Palestine, but did expect them to help the wretched wanderer to find a home."

Miss Szold made a plea for moral and financial aid to the movement, and showed a number of pictures of Jewish institutions in Palestine.

Mrs. Richard Gottheil of New York added her appeal to that of Miss Szold for co-operation with the Zionist cause.

A communication from Miss Hellen Fleisher announced contributions amounting to $2,250 for the employment of a social worker to look after Jewish girls.

HARD WATER IS HEALTHFUL

German Scientist Finds Teeth Are Aided by Lime Deposits Which It Contains.

Hard water, particularly water containing much lime in solution, is popularly supposed to be bad for the health.

But the observations of a German specialist named Rose go to show that hard drinking water and good teeth go together. With the usual German thoroughness, he supports his claims with statistics, according to the Boston Globe.

From several thousand examinations of the teeth of children, he says that where water has less than two degrees of hardness there are only 1.3 per cent. of sound sets of teeth. As the hardness of the water increases the percentage goes up, until, where the hardness is 35 degrees, more than 20 per cent. of the children have sound teeth.

The best teeth were found in localities where, in addition to lime, there was magnesia, which hardens the enamel.

As to general health, the number of young men fit for military service is greatest in the hard-water districts. In one department where the degree of hardness was 10 degrees, the proportion of recruits was only half that of another, where 30 degrees was the rule.

GARDEN PLANTING.

We all mean to go out in our gardens and sow our annuals at the proper season, but no matter how good our intentions may be, there are always interruptions that put us back, so when spring cleaning, dressmaking, measles or anything else prevents you from carrying out your plan and you realize that everyone else in your suburb has got ahead of you, here is a help that seldom fails:
Put your sweet pea seeds and nasturtium seeds to soak in a jar of water for 24 or 36 hours before planting them. They will come up in half the time they would if planted in the ordinary way. The same idea holds good for any hard seed which naturally takes a long time to germinate.

OPENLY DIVULGE AGE.

In Japan every woman has to dress according to her age, and it is pretty certain that such a fashion, if fashion it is, will never prevail in this country. Suppose it were the rule that every woman upon a certain birthday anniversary should adopt a certain kind of dress, there would be a forgetting of birthday dates in very short order. In Japan a woman wears gold pins until she is twenty-five. At thirty the pins are white, merely spotted with gold, and at forty she wears plain shell combs.
Her shoes are also changed as the age changes.

Though he is now a member of the bar and qualified to practice in Kentucky, he is going back to Yale College on the 15th of this month for another year in the law department of that institution.

SUMMER LINGERS.

Mercury Rested at Century Mark and Above Three Successive Days.

Everybody has had more than enough of "the good old summer time" already, but the weather clerk is not handing out some "hot ones." Last Sunday the maximum temperature was an even hundred. Tuesday it was 103 and Wednesday 101. A strong breeze yesterday morning afforded relief, but the forecast was not encouraging. The message sent out contained but one word, "Fair."

SMART MAINE WOMAN.

Mrs. Abiah F. Nason of North Ellsworth knows how to keep young. She has just celebrated her eighty-second birthday, yet her hands never know an idle moment. She washes dishes, cooks, sews, knits and mends. No stitches are finer than hers, or more rapidly set. Mrs. Nason makes most beautiful rugs and quilts, and has made this spring two rugs and pieced two quilts, one of velvet and one of silk, besides quantities of other work. Her keen wit and ready tongue make her an enjoyable companion for young and old.—Kennebec Journal.

Another Game For Crofton—R. Croft is in Fine Form.

The strong Crofton ball team defeated the Dawson Springs aggregation of ball tossers last Thursday at Dawson, 19 to 8. The Crofton boys hit Price, Wyatt and Odum for thirty four clean hits, Croft leading them with seven singles out of as many times up. P. Blades, O. Blades and T. Jones each getting five hits. Long pitched his usual good game and had the Dawson boys at his mercy for eight innings. In the ninth he became wild, walking five men and allowing three to hit safely and when he again settled down Dawson had scored five runs. Following is a summary of the game:

AFTER 43 YEARS

Place So Changed That He Hardly Knew Where He Was.

Another Hopkinsville boy, after spending the best part of his life in Colorado, found his way here yesterday. Dave Johnson left here 43 years ago and this is his first visit. The first thing he did yesterday morning after coming down town was to look for the Rock Spring, from which he used to drink when a boy, and from which he carried water to his home when the water in the cistern gave out. His father was a blacksmith and his shop stood on the corner of Ninth and Virginia streets. His father's home stood on the spot where the Gunn house was built on Ninth street, recently torn down to make room for the postoffice building. The town has undergone so many changes in 43 years that Mr. Johnson hardly knew where he was, the Phoenix building being the only landmark from which he could take his bearings.

FILLING UP

Jailer Mullins' Boarding House a Little Crowded.

The county jail last Monday contained 18 people. All of the prisoners are colored except one, a woman. Since the last term of Circuit Court the colored population seems to have been going at a rapid rate in violating the laws in almost every conceivable way. At the next term of court the criminal docket will be large and the grand jury will have plenty of material to work on.
